WHEREAS, the proclamation calls upon Americans to reflect on the value and importance of the oceans not only to our security and economy, but also as a source of recreation, enjoyment and relaxation, and recognizes the importance of the nation’s offshore areas for security, economic independence, all while protecting the marine environment for present and future generations; and

WHEREAS, the proclamation also recognizes the importance of fisheries resources and the opportunities for expansion of our seafood exports, and states: “The fisheries resources of the United States are among the most valuable in the world.
