

Refrigerated Cargo

We build our business around your business

Refrigerated cargo ships differently. Every minute spent keeping it cool costs a little more. When speed is important, long processing lines and wasted time are truly wasted money.

The Port of San Diego specializes in specialty cargo.

We have the space, flexibility, expertise, competitive rates and commitment to customer service to handle all of your refrigerated cargo needs, large or small, including produce, frozen goods, temperature-controlled equipment and other perishables.

We help you take advantage of being different.

Fewer large container ships means less time processing, less time waiting, less time wasted. Move your refrigerated cargo from ship to cold storage to market much faster – and keep your cool in the process. That's the special advantage San Diego offers.

Terminal Features:

- On-dock cold storage facility – 300,000 square feet (27,871 square meters)
- Wheeled container facility – 274,217 square feet (83,362 square meters) plus additional open space
- More than 700 480-volt refrigerated container plugs built in partnership with Dole
- Less than 300 feet (91 meters) from vessel to cold storage
- On-dock shore power facility
- 42-foot draft (12.8 meters)
- Access to interstates 8, 5, 15 and 805 within minutes
